The infographic above displays how politically divided the most popular platforms of social media are. With this visual, there are many pros it presents: the visual appropriately uses grouped bar charts and uses different colors to indicate the frequency of users based on political alliance. However, one critique that I do have is that it doesn't correctly represent the difference in height between the bars. For example, when looking at the height of the bars for Tik Tok, the difference looks a bit bigger than it actually is.
